The Whiskey Frauds. Mr. Secretary Bristow is in danger of falling because of too much honesty. It was not expected that a head of department would be over-eurious about bad practices much. Nor, indeed, has a leading member of the Republican party any interest in crippling his colleagues by cenying them all chances to feather their nests and give freely the means that are essential to carry the elections. How simple, indeed, Mr. Bristow is to be ignorant of these things! And so the rings and fraud-practisers have set upon him as an enemy in the camp. They are questioning his motives. They charge him with paying his own way to the presidency, and in virtuous indignity exclaim against the horrid atrocity of endeavoring to reach the presidency by honesty!

The whiskey tax is the greatest source of fraud in the country. Besides the numerous tricks to defraud the Government out of revenue, there is during the whole legislaand distillers. The increase of the whiskey neered through Congress with that view.

Death has been a little busy of late years with well known men in Virginia, and not a | the most important work of the Legislature few have been rather prematurely laid in the into the last few days of its session. Hastily grave. Yesterday we announced the death of Major William Allen, of Claremont, and to-day we announce that of Colonel HILL CARTER, of Shirley.

Colonel Carter was a true gentleman and one of the most experienced agriculturists in the State. He was an honor to the class of farmers. Educated for the navy, he left the profession at an early age and came, at the death of his father, to take charge of his estate. He soon proved his strong qualities of energy, activity, stout will, and practical sagacity. He brought the fine estate of Shirley to a high and successful condition of cultivation. It became a model of tillage, and order and system prevailed upon it. He not only exhibited to his brother-farmers one of the finest examples in the State, but he did the cause of agriculture distinguished ser-

He was well informed on public matters, and took at times an active part in party | single grasshopper. affairs. He was a member of the Virginia Convention of 1850 to amend the Constitution, and was more than once the Whigparty candidate for Congress in the Charles City district. In all the public positions in which he was placed he exercised a decided influence as a man of strong intellect and excellent judgment. Personally it may be said of him very emphatically that he was without fear and without reproach. Of the that city when all the world comes to Bunold school of earnest, brave men-positive | ker Hill. and not unfrequently stern in judgmenthe was yet a kind-hearted gentleman, and under his own roof a generous host and a nobleman. He was about seventy years of ago.

Major Allen, of whose life some notice was given in our paper of yesterday, was the heir of his uncle's name and fortune. Years ago it was a mooted question whether the then venerable SAMUEL HAIRSTON, of Pittsylvania, or Major Allen was the richest man in the State. WILLIAM ALLEN, of Surry, the uncle, was a man of great wealth. In the celebrated Convention of 1829 Benja-MIN WATKINS LEIGH spoke of the bountiful and excellent hospitality of Claremont in a manner that added much to its fame.

Major ALLEN lost greatly by the ravages of war, and his wide and fruitful lands were sadly changed-where abundance and contentment prevailed in a population of kindly treated, abundantly supplied, and contented laboring people, disorder, diminished production, and unrest ensued. The wealthy land-owner displayed untiring zeal to restore order and fruitfulness, and had store order and fruitfulness, and had achieved a great deal. It was surprising to see a man like him, raised to affluence and Tills (Friday) MORNING at 12 o'clock. Friends of the family MORNING at 12 o'clock. It may be said of him with entire one at $18.75, one at $18-average, $24.28. truth that the suffering ever left his premises full-handed, and that under his roof there was always displayed a princely hospitality.

The date at the head of Mr. blan's poem in yesterday's Dispatch should have been May 20, 1775.

Chimborazo We observe that about five acres of Chimborazo Hill are to be sold in a few days at auction. We hope that the city authorities will arrange for keeping the property out of the bands of speculators. Were they to get hold of it very probably all plans for improving the hill for public use will be do-feated. We look upon that place as peculiarly pro. per for public improvement. We beg the city authorities to think that it is not a mere matter of fancy or pleasure that should prompt them to make such a place from which the citizen and passenger could behold the charming river scene. It would be a positive benefit to the city and a positive stimulus to its improvement. A pleasant place on Chimborazo would be the locality for deriving the most favorable impressions and suggesting the most hopeful
